New Primary Care Practice Opens in Camp Creek

ATLANTA – Dec. 11, 2014 – People who live or work in Camp Creek now have a convenient option for health care.

Atlanta Medical Center Primary Care Physicians at Camp Creek has opened off Camp Creek Parkway, in the medical complex. Same-day appointments are available.

Dr. Michelle Cooke, a board certified family medicine physician, is accepting new patients. She specializes in providing primary care services to all age groups – from newborns to seniors. Dr. Cooke is available for sick visits as well as preventive care services (annual physicals and health screenings). She also works with her patients to control chronic illnesses such as diabetes and high blood pressure.

Her interests are women’s and children’s health; obesity prevention and management; and diabetes prevention and management. Dr. Cooke is also certified to offer Department of Transportation physicals.

A native of Boston, Dr. Cooke graduated from Spelman College and earned her medical degree from Morehouse School of Medicine. She completed a residency in family medicine at Atlanta Medical Center, serving as chief resident. A wife and mother, she lives in Southwest Atlanta. Dr. Cooke also speaks Spanish.

“I look forward to serving the residents of Camp Creek, and hope to make a positive impact on healthcare for the greater Atlanta community,” Dr. Cooke says.

Services include:

Preventive screenings and complete physical exams

Sports participation physical exams

Well-child checks and well-woman exams

Chronic disease management

Prenatal care
