

Morehouse School of Medicine Prevention Research Center (MSM PRC) National Awards and Recognition

MSM PRC is nationally recognized as the best of its kind in the delivery of Community Based Participatory Research (CBPR). The following is a listing of awards that we have received to date for outstanding work with the community:

- 2002 - MSM PRC was presented an award by the Community-Campus Partnerships for Health honoring its community partnership's exemplary contribution towards improving health professions, education, civic responsibility and the overall health of communities.
- 2004 - MSM PRC won the Outstanding Community-Based Participatory Research Award from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).
- 2005 - MSM PRC received the Award for Excellence in Community-Based Research for its Community Coalition.
- 2005 - Fulton County Department of Health and Wellness presented MSM PRC with a certificate of appreciation for outstanding dedication to communities with the REACH for Wellness Program.
- 2010 - MSM PRC was the recipient of the Georgia Healthcare Foundation's 2010 Joseph D. Greene Community Service Award for continued extraordinary commitment to improving the quality of health and healthcare of those it serves.
- 2010 - CDC's National Prevention Research Center Program Office recognized MSM PRC (along with 16 of 37 centers) for effective implementation of CBPR.
- 2011 - CDC National Prevention Research Center's National Community Committee awarded the MSM PRC with a Best Practice Award in Community-Based Participatory Research.